Description (max. 100 words)	This course focuses on the theoretical and practical aspects of contrastive analysis. The theoretical part deals with the development and the aim of contrastive analysis, different methods of analysis and the use of contrastive analysis in applied linguistics. It also involves practical part which focuses on the structures of English and Serbian that may cause problems in translation or teaching. Students analyse official translations in order to find a whole range of equivalents certain language structures may have in the other language.
Learning outcomes (max. 50 words)	Students understand the value of contrastive analysis and divergent relationships between the structures of their mother tongue and English. Deeper insight into these two language systems enables them higher competencies in translation as well as in teaching those language structures.
